NATE HOMAN, REPORTER

The old-time adage about lions, lambs and the month of March holds true for the Bay State, as two winter storms and a cold front are expected to hit on Wednesday and Saturday. With any luck, this will be the last of the winter weather, though there have been a few reputable early-spring snowstorm sucker punches thrown our way. The nor'easter that dropped almost two feet of snow on March 14, 2017, and the infamous April Fool's Day Blizzard, which clobbered most of the East Coast and coated Massachusetts with 26 inches on April 1, 1997, come to mind.

Trump, Kim to meet for dinner at Hanoi hotel

1 President Donald Trump and North Korean leader Kim Jong Un begin their second summit in less than a year in the Vietnamese capital on Wednesday, with the U.S. side seeking tangible steps by North Korea to dismantle its nuclear weapons program. The White House said Trump would meet Kim at Hanoi's French-colonial-era Metropole Hotel at 6:30 p.m. and have a 20-minute one-on-one conversation before a dinner scheduled to last just over an hour and a half. Trump flew into Hanoi on Air Force One late on Tuesday. "Just arrived in Vietnam," he wrote in a Twitter post. "Thank you to all of the people for the great reception in Hanoi. Tremendous crowds, and so much love!" Kim arrived by train early in the day after a three-day, 1,850-mile trip from his capital, Pyongyang, through China. He completed the last stretch from a border station to Hanoi by car.

Cohen to give new Russia details to Congress

2 President Donald Trump's former personal attorney Michael Cohen will tell lawmakers this week that Trump asked him several times about a proposed skyscraper project in Moscow long after he secured the Republican presidential nomination, a person familiar with the matter told Reuters. As Special Counsel Robert Mueller appears to be near the end of his probe into whether Russia meddled in the 2016 presidential election in collusion with Trump's campaign, Cohen's assertion that Trump was inquiring about the skyscraper project as late as June 2016, if true, would show Trump remained personally engaged in the venture well into his candidacy. Cohen was set to offer lawmakers new information about Trump's private affairs over three consecutive days of in-depth discussion with a congressional committee that began on Tuesday.

KIM JONG-UN ARRIVES IN VIETNAM

3 North Korean leader Kim Jong-un (C) arrives at the Dong Dang railway station in Dong Dang, Lang Son province, on Feb. 26, 2019, to attend the second U.S.-North Korea summit. North Korean leader Kim crossed into Vietnam on Feb. 26 after a marathon train journey for a second summit showdown with President Donald Trump, with the world looking for concrete progress over the North's nuclear program.

Top strategists split from Bernie Sanders' 2020 run

4 Three of the top media strategists for Democratic presidential contender Bernie Sanders stepped away from his 2020 campaign on Tuesday, citing creative differences over their vision for his fledgling White House run. Prominent consultants Tad Devine, Mark Longabaugh and Julian Mulvey, who played leading roles in Sanders' insurgent 2016 presidential campaign, said they would not work on the Vermont senator's 2020 bid for the Democratic nomination, which was launched last week. "We are leaving because we believe that Senator Sanders deserves to have media consultants who share his creative vision for the campaign," the three said in a joint statement. The three are partners in a media consulting firm that produced 275 television, radio and digital ads for the Sanders campaign in the 2016 race.

Travel ban denied tens of thousands more US visas

5 The U.S. State Department refused more than 37,000 visa applications in 2018 due to the Trump administration's travel ban, up from fewer than 1,000 the previous year when the ban had not fully taken effect, according to agency data released on Tuesday. The United States denies nearly 4 million visa applications a year for a variety of reasons, including for practicing polygamy, abducting children or simply not qualifying for the visa in question. The data released Tuesday was the first comprehensive look at the human impact of Republican President Donald Trump's ban, imposed shortly after he took office and initially blocked by federal courts. The ban has especially affected people from Iran, Libya, Somalia, Syria and Yemen, countries where the number of visas issued slid 80 percent in 2018 from 2016, the last year without a travel ban.

Two snowstorms are headed our way this week.

NATE HOMAN
letters@metro.us

The month of February is expected to end in a cold and snowy fury.

The weekend's wild winds, which left around 68,000 customers without power earlier this week, will have died down but a bitter cold front is heading our way.

The Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency reported that Cambridge, Tyngsboro, Revere and Westford were hit hardest, with gusts topping out near 70 mph.

The National Weather Service reported that Monday's gusts reached sustained speeds between 25 and 35 mph, and topped out at 67 mph at the Blue Hills in Milton, 66 mph in North Adams and 60 mph in Worcester. As of 7 a.m. Tuesday, MEMA reported 24,867 homes were experiencing power outages. Some towns reported entire areas were experiencing near-total outages throughout Western Massachusetts, including 99 percent of households in Worthington, in Hampshire County, and in the adjacent town of Chester, in Hampden County.

High winds to subside as wintry mix hits midweek

The National Weather Service predicted a chance of snow on Wednesday, mainly after 4 p.m., with a high near 25 and wind-chill reaching as low as -5 to -15 degrees.

Wednesday's snowfall wasn't expected to add up to much during the day, but storms were expected to reach the Boston area Thursday between 5 a.m. and 9 a.m., dumping between 2 to 4 inches right in time for the morning rush-hour commute.

Temperatures were supposed to hit highs near freezing and lows in the 20s.

Daniel Sloss brings the laughs to Boston this weekend. ALL PHOTOS METFLIX

Daniel Sloss used to buy shots for his Boston audience

The Scottish comedian brings his latest tour, titled "X," to The Wilbur this weekend.

ANDREW HUSBAND
drew.husband@metro.us

For the past month, Daniel Sloss has been performing his comedy show "X" off-Broadway at the the SoHo Playhouse in New York. This weekend, the Scottish comic whose Netflix special "Jigsaw" has reportedly resulted in thousands of breakups, called-off engagements and divorces will bring the show to Boston's The Wilbur.

And he couldn't be happier.

"I can't f—ing wait," he tells Metro. "I think it was about four years ago when I did Boston and I sold like 40 tickets over the course of three days. Forty tickets for three f—ing shows, and for every single one of the shows, I had to buy the audience shots and drinks to appease them."

"Now, thanks to Netflix," he laughs, "I get to go to the f—ing Wilbur Theatre. It's f—ing ridiculous, and I'm very, very excited about it."

This doesn't mean Sloss is going to buy everyone in attendance a round of drinks, of course, so don't get too excited.

Rather, the 28-year-old performer simply cannot believe his luck.

The Wilbur is one of the oldest and most respected comedy venues in New England. Some of the biggest names in the business have performed to packed houses there. The names of Bill Burr, Aziz Ansari and many others are emblazoned on plaques located behind many of the seats in the balcony. This Saturday, Sloss will get to add his name to the list.

His excitement notwithstanding, the comedian won't be changing his aggressively funny and insightful demeanor to appease his Boston fans. After all, this is the same man who tweeted at an inquiring fan in January: "You're all f—ing morons, BTW. Every last one of you."

Sloss wasn't being mean for the sake of meanness. The fan in question had begged him to come to Boston without Googling the comic's name beforehand. Because if they had, they would have seen Sloss's name listed among the March performances scheduled for The Wilbur.

"If only there was a handy website with all my f—ing tour dates," he joked while providing a link to his website.

"I've got zero problem trash-talking my fans," Sloss explains. "I'm not going to sit there and f—ing pamper you, just as I don't expect my audience to pamper me. I expect my audience to correct me when I f—ing step out of line. That's how I will grow as a comedian."

If you go:

March 2, 7 p.m., The Wilbur, 246 Tremont St., $37, thewilbur.com

That's the only way I can grow, to be honest."

To be clear, the comedian doesn't want his Wilbur audience to heckle him incessantly Saturday. Considering how the #MeToo movement has (and hasn't) affected the American standup-comedy scene, however, Sloss recognizes how important these uncomfortable dialogues between entertainers and the people they're entertaining are.

"I mean, who else is going to tell me what I can and cannot say?"

Bar Mercato brings classic European flair to Boston

A lot of people dream of traveling to Europe. There's great food, great drinks, great people, berets, baguettes and cigarettes—and that's just France! Well, hold on to your baseball caps, because you can travel to Europe by hopping on the Orange Line to Bar Mercato, a European-inspired food hall, which recently opened its doors inside the new Hyatt Centric Hotel.

The restaurant is the brain child of the Trio Restaurant Group's Teodora Bakardzhieva, Jairo Dominguez and Theo Bougas. Bar Mercato is not the only restaurant on their resume; the restaurant joins Allston's new Casa Caña Latin kitchen and rum bar, Publico Street Bistro and Backyard Betty's.

Married couple Bakardzhieva and Dominguez are quite the team, basing their latest venture on public markets and food halls from their European travels. The restaurant follows a familiar theme of trendy food halls that have sprouted in Boston as of late. In European culture, visiting a food hall or open air market is a social event. The owners hope to mimic this feeling with Bar Mercato.

The restaurant will serve breakfast, lunch and dinner with classic European flair. Former Post 390 executive sous chef, Casey J. Lovell is commanding the kitchen, offering a modern interpretation of cuisine found in food halls and farmers' markets. This means a range of snacks, small plates and entrees, all with quality ingredients.

The breakfast menu includes scotch eggs, Eggs Benedict, frittatas, omelettes and more. The lunch menu includes a lamb gyro, a porchetta sandwich, a herring BLT and house-made fettuccine, while the dinner menu boasts blue fish gravlax, a steak tartare, a Fig & Pig flatbread and many more options.

Bar Mercato also has a grab-and-go café counter in the hotel lobby with pastries, snacks and a full coffee menu. In classic European style, the coffee counter will also serve wine, beer and vermouth.

Speaking of booze, Bakardzhieva is also the mastermind behind the drink menu of the restaurant. Her beverages include a selection of wine and beer across Europe and the United States. She also includes a large selection of original cocktails such as Lady of Versailles (Bombay Gin), St. Germain (cardamom, lemon, bubbly) and Greece Lightning (Grey Goose Vodka, fenel, espresso, mint, and a Greek liqueur, mastiha). The drink menu features a selection of vermouths and Italian spirits as well, if you're feeling fancy.

Bar Mercato has an open floor plan, with an 18-seat bar through the restaurant. The 48-seat dining room is adorned with worn furniture invoking a homey feeling. The owners clearly put great thought and care into transporting guests across the sea without ever leaving Boston.

Bar Mercato serves breakfast daily from 7 a.m.-11 a.m.; lunch until 3 p.m.; snacks at the bars between 3 p.m.-5 p.m.; and dinner until 10:30 p.m. on week days and 11 p.m. on weekends. The coffee counter is open daily from 6:30 a.m.-7 p.m. MOIRA CALLAHAN

3 Key position battles at Red Sox camp this spring training

The defending champs have some in-house dealings to attend to.

JULIAN EDLOW
sports@metro.us

However, like any team, the Sox still have a few positions to workout before Opening Day rolls around on March 28 in Seattle.

Here are three key position battles to keep an eye on:

CLOSER: RYAN BRASIER VS. MATT BARNES

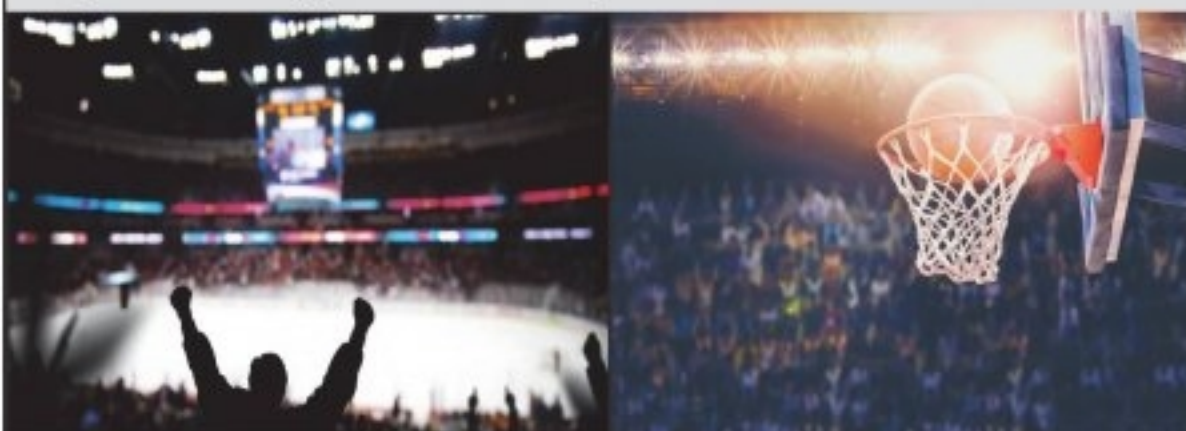

With Craig Kimbrel still on the free agent money, and reportedly looking for way too much money, the Red Sox have reached the point where the closer position will be determined internally. Joe Kelly is off to the Dodgers, leaving Brasier and Barnes as the two best arms in the bullpen.

Brasier isn't much of a strikeout pitcher, but he simply did not allow runs when Alex Cora inserted him into games last season. Brasier posted just a 1.60 ERA in the regular season, and was a crucial part of the team's postseason success, allowing just one run in 8.2 innings over his 14 appearances. A toe injury has kept Brasier from participating at spring training recently, so he'll need to show some healthy performances before the regular season rolls around.

Barnes is more of your traditional closer, averaging over 14 punchouts per nine innings in 2018. While that upside is welcomed in the ninth inning, his 3.65 ERA from last season also makes him more of a risk. Barnes was just as clutch as Brasier in the postseason, though, allowing just one run in 8.2 innings of his own.

The Red Sox will likely platoon between righty Steve Pearce and lefty Mitch Moreland at first base. It's possible the Red Sox give both of these guys opportunities to close before deciding on a closer the rest of the way out.

CATCHER: SANDY LEON VS. CHRISTIAN VAZQUEZ VS.

BLAKE SWIHART

The catcher position was an all-out mess in 2018. Leon, the best defensive option of the group, played in 89 games last season but hit for an ice-cold .177 batting average. Vazquez has the best arm of the group, but wasn't much better than Leon offensively, hitting for a .207 average in 80 games. It's possible we see these two guys split time again.

The more realistic option is trading one of the three and picking a starter, though, as the Red Sox have stated they'd like to settle on an everyday starting catcher — obviously with a backup to take a couple starts a week. Swihart could make the most sense for this option.

Swihart hit .229 in 82 games last season, but it's not really a concrete sample. Swihart has plenty of offensive upside, but it's been depressed by moving him all over the field as a utility player — outfield, both sides of the infield and catcher. He's been working hard with the coaches on his defensive skills behind the plate all offseason, so if the team were to commit to him in 2019, it could be rewarded with some great upside on offense. His ability to last an entire season defensively will be the question.

SECOND BASE: DUSTIN PEDROIA VS. BROCK HOLT VS. EDUARDO NUNEZ

It sounds like this is Pedroia's job to lose, and as much as he's a fan favorite, Pedroia should have a short leash here. Pedroia played in just three games last season, and only more than 105 games once in the last three seasons. Pedroia will not only have to stay healthy in 2019, but he's going to have to bounce back to a level he hasn't been on since 2016 — when he hit for a .318 average in 154 games.

If Pedroia falters, trusty options are right behind him in Nunez and Holt. While that duo could also be tasked with helping out the young Rafael Devers at third base at times, this will be a big season to see if Devers can manage the full-time job.

The bottom line is that we know Holt and Nunez are at least capable of platooning this job if Pedroia isn't performing at a starting level. If any one of these three positions drags on for the season, it'll be second base. Let's see what kind of start a healthy Pedroia can get off to if he wins the job, but he'll be under a microscope if he doesn't perform.

Jeffery Simmons could be a draft target of the New England Patriots. GETTY IMAGES

3 Positions Patriots could target at 2019 NFL Draft

With the NFL Combine underway, here are three positions that need upgrading.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

One of the first steps of legitimately evaluating possible NFL Draft talents began on Tuesday in Indianapolis with the start of the 2019 NFL Combine.

While the actual selection process is still two months away, NFL coaches, scouts, and management alike will have an opportunity to evaluate 338 of the best collegiate talents in the country.

The New England Patriots might still be polishing their sixth Lombardi Trophy after yet another Super Bowl triumph earlier this month, but there are some major areas of need for the defending champions and the Combine is one of the best places to start addressing those issues.

Here are three areas that the Patriots might be looking to improve on come draft day:

1. WIDE RECEIVER

Despite Tom Brady's ability to make every receiver better around him, the Patriots' wide receiving corps. is in need of a serious boost.

Behind Super Bowl MVP and Brady's favorite target, Julian Edelman, the cupboard is bare. Chris Hogan, Phillip Dorsett, and Cordarrelle Patterson are unrestricted free agents this year, leaving the likes of Matthew Slater, Braxton Berrios, and Darren Andrews as the only secure options besides Edelman.

Not to mention that Josh Gordon is suspended indefinitely.

Obviously, the Patriots will bring back a few of those free agents, but picking up a legitimate No. 2 option could go a long way to extend Brady's run as one of the game's best. Oklahoma's Marquise Brown and Ole Miss' DK Metcalf are among the strongest receivers in the class of 2019.

2. DEFENSIVE END

The Patriots are facing the possibility of losing two top edge rushers in free agency this season as Trey Flowers and John Simon are about to hit the open market.

There is plenty of depth at the position even if both of those players leave as New England has Adrian Clayborn, Deatrich Wise, Derek Rivers, Ufomba Kamalu, and Keionta Davis still under contract.

Besides Clayborn, most of the rest are unproven, which could force the Patriots to draft a highly-touted talent to provide more of a leading option on the depth chart.

Florida's Jachai Polite or Florida State's Brian Burns could be sensible choices at the end of the first round.

3. DEFENSIVE TACKLE

In terms of depth, defensive tackle is the Patriots' largest position of need. Behind Lawrence Guy and Adam Butler, New England might be in serious trouble should Malcom Brown and Danny Shelton walk in unrestricted free agency.

If the Patriots can't retain either of them, then there are zero options behind Butler and Guy, making the position the most likely first-round target for Bill Belichick and Co.

They could take a gamble on Mississippi State defensive tackle Jeffery Simmons, who would normally be a top-10 prospect if not for an ACL injury that has seen his draft stock drop.

Aries Don't waste time trying to get others to pitch in. Your energy will be better spent taking care of business. A proposal should be looked at cautiously. Read the fine print.

Taurus Do what you can to help, but don't let anyone take advantage of you. Offer suggestions, but be hesitant when it comes to financial involvement.

Gemini Put greater emphasis on your relationships. If you overreact or let someone take advantage of you, it will be difficult to reverse the damage. Moderation is your best bet.

Cancer Don't let moodiness ruin your day. Look on the bright side and offer positive suggestions. Avoid excessive or indulgent behavior. Stick to people who share your interests.

Leo Personal change can be made. Consider how you earn your living and what you would like to be doing with your time. Attend an event that will help you update your skills.

Virgo Mingle, share your thoughts and consider getting into a joint venture with a like-minded individual. A little romance will help cement your relations with someone special.

Libra Weigh all sides of a situation before you decide to get involved in a debate. It won't be worth your while if you engage in a standoff with a stubborn rival.

Scorpio Pay it forward. What you do for others will be admirable, but don't jeopardize your beliefs or financial situation to take care of someone who isn't willing to reciprocate.

Sagittarius Keep your emotions tucked away somewhere safe. If you are too revealing, someone will take advantage of you. Check the facts before you share information that someone offers you.

Capricorn Changes made at home may not be welcome at first, but you will eventually see the benefits. Review the past, assess the situation and prepare to move forward.

Aquarius Volunteer or make personal changes that will help you let go of the past. Don't give in to temptation or get involved with anyone who is a poor influence.

Pisces Focus on work, how you earn your living and how can you use what you have to improve your life and the lives of those dear to your heart. EUGENIA LAST
